SOCIETY*Hildreth-McKinney.

Lawrence Hildreth and Miss Cora McKinney were married this week at Macedonia Christian church, Fayette county, Elder E. W. Delcamp, officiating. Mrs. John McKinney and Miss Elizabeth Graves were the bride's attendants, while Walter Hildreth, brother of the groom, was best man. The groom has charge of a large grain and coal business at Avon. The bride is the lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McKinney, formerly of this county, and has many friends here whom we join in congratulations.

Handsome Son.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Stewart are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a handsome son at their home, 605 West Maple street, Tuesday morning.

The above is from the Enid Morning News, Enid, Oklahoma, and will be interesting to Winchester people. Mr. Stewart was formerly manager of the Kentucky Evening Gazette and The Lexington Herald, leaving Lexington to go to Enid, where he bought the Enid Morning News, a paper which he now controls.

Mrs. Stewart was formerly Miss Margaret O'Brien. She was connected with the Kentucky Evening Gazette when Mr. Stewart was manager. They were married soon after the purchase of the News, over a year ago, and went to Enid to live.

Mrs. Stewart formerly lived here, where she is much loved and admired.

Mrs. William Warren and daughter, Miss Letitia, of Danville, are guests of her daughter, Mrs. Lucien Beckner.

Mrs. W. A. Beatty has returned from a visit to her sister, Mrs. John E. Roche in Louisville.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Munson and Mrs. VanWaits, of Cincinnati, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Endicott.

Mr. H. H. Phillips was in Louisville on business Thursday.

Mrs. Robert Ogden is suffering from a severely sprained ankle.

Mr. L. H. Bush has arrived from New York.

Miss Glorena Elkin will entertain with a "Hallowe'en" party.

Dr. W. Carl Grant and family have taken apartments with Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Scrivener.

Miss Sue Scrivener is visiting in Richmond.

Miss Allie Hensley has accepted a position with the Scrivener store and would be pleased to see her friends.

Mrs. Otis Flynn attended the funeral of Miss Annie Gnadinger at Cincinnati.

Mrs. Narcissus Bell, of Lexington, is visiting her niece Miss Orie Stevenson.

Miss Eddie Osborne is visiting in Richmond.

Mrs. J. B. Cockrell of Mt. Sterling, has returned home after attending the Gilliam-Nunnally wedding.

Mr. Matt Madigan attended the burial of Miss Annie Gnadinger at Paris.

Mr. F. M. Broyles, of Ashland, stopped over here Friday night, en route from Knoxville, where he attended the Exposition.

Miss Pattie Ramsey, who has been quite ill of appendicitis and intestinal indigestion at her home in the county is improving.

Miss Rebecca Jones and Miss Polly Baldwin visited in Lexington Friday.

Mrs. Cliff Owens and Mrs. Howard Hampton are visiting Mrs. James Elkin at Versailles.

Mrs. Sallie Early of Cornett, Ind., will arrive Saturday night to be with her daughter, Miss Clara Early.

News has been received by relatives here to the effect that Mr. Nathaniel Haggard formerly of this city is quite ill at his home in Louisville.

Mr. J. W. Dawson, of the county who recently purchased the J. M. Powell grocery, has moved to Winchester and will probably take possession of the store on Monday.

Miss May Eversole, of London, is visiting Mrs. Eli Cornett.

Mrs. M. E. Ladd and Miss Anna May Tucker are visiting Mrs. Chas. J. Scott and others.

LARGE CROWD AT SPEAKING

Joint Debate is Held at Prestonburg Between John W. Langley and A. Floyd Byrd.

(Special to The News.)

PRESTONBURG, Ky., Oct. 29.—

The largest crowd ever assembled in Prestonburg to listen to a political discussion was here Tuesday to hear the joint debate between Congressman John W. Langley and A. Floyd Byrd. Mr. Langley was accorded a division of time by Mr. Byrd, who had advertised his speaking some time ago. The followers of both candidates indulged in a great deal of cheering and applause, and enthusiasm was at the highest pitch throughout the discussion which lasted nearly three hours.

Mr. Langley was born and reared in this county, is deservedly popular and has a very strong following among Democrats. Almost every friend and relative he has in the county were present Tuesday, and in was conceded that two-thirds of the crowd were with him.

Mr. Byrd and his managers were much chagrined over the demonstration in favor of Langley, and Mr. Byrd's speech was not up to the standard that his friends expected. He confined himself almost entirely to a discussion of the tariff, and his anti-protection views did not take well with many of his own party. He omitted several of the statements he had made at other points regarding Langley, but the latter had stenographic reports of Mr. Byrd's previous utterances, and took them up one by one literally tearing them to pieces, producing documentary evidence that contradicted Mr. Byrd in nearly a dozen instances. He demanded that Mr. Byrd go back to the places where he had made these statements and apologize to the people for his misrepresentations. During this portion of his exhortation of his opponents position he was wildly cheered by his friends.

This was the best campaign speech Mr. Langley has made. He gave a masterly exposition of the protective tariff system as applied to the farmer and a comparatively undeveloped country like the Sandy Valley, devoting some time to the protection of coal and lumber. He reviewed his work in Congress and mentioned the additional measures he would advocate when re-elected, and severely arraigned Mr. Byrd for his position on pensions and internal improvements and scored him for his advocacy of "free coal and free lumber."

It was a red letter day for the Republican candidate and unless all signs fail it presages his re-election. His friends made all sorts of fun of the report that had been circulated that he was avoiding a joint debate with his opponent, and although this county (Floyd) is strongly Democratic, it is predicted that he will carry it from three to four hundred.

A Ring at The Doorbell

By LOUISE IDA ROSS

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Trevor were sitting one October evening before a blazing wood fire—they had not yet lighted the furnace—and the room was aglow and redolent with the pleasant odor of burning wood. The children had been romping. Mr. Trevor, carrying Bessie pigback and Willie on all fours, but their mother had now taken them all, including the girls, up to bed, tucked them in, kissed them good night and had returned with her sewing, which she was doing by the big lamp on the table, while Mr. Trevor read a magazine.

There was a ring at the bell. Now, for many years there was something in the ring of his doorbell that cast a sober look over Samuel Trevor's face. But to explain the reason for this it is necessary to go back to the time when he was a very young man.

When he was but eighteen his father, who was a lumber merchant, sent his son to a lumber camp that he might learn the business, which would one day be his, from the beginning. There is danger to all persons of that age of inexperience and recklessness that they may make a mess of it, and on that account it is a bad plan to take them away from young girls of their own social circle and place them among their inferiors. And where would a young man of refinement find people more his inferiors than in a lumber camp? Among the girls there was Madge Hopkins, the daughter of a lumberman, several years older than Trevor, who lured him into indiscretions with her, then threatened him with vengeance if he refused to marry her. He did so, but immediately left the camp.

An effort was made to annul the marriage, but it was unsuccessful. Then the woman offered to refrain from troubling her husband if his father would support her. Remittances were sent regularly for a season, when suddenly a newspaper was received containing a notice of her death. No doubt was felt of the truth of the notice when several years had passed and, no remittances having been sent, no demand was made for them.

Twelve years after the conclusion of this episode Samuel Trevor married Agatha Beach. He told her all about it before being engaged to her, not expressing a doubt that his first wife was dead. "You may be sure of that," said Agatha, "or she would be drawing the lifeblood out of you." Nevertheless Trevor, having had nothing but the death notice to prove to him Madge Hopkins' demise, never felt absolutely sure. And that was the reason why a certain dread was connected with the ringing of his doorbell.

A maid in a neat uniform of black and white went to the door, and the wife and husband heard a woman's coarse voice ask for Mr. Trevor. Then, without waiting to be answered, the caller brushed past the maid and into the sitting room.

"Hello, Sam!" she said. Trevor put his hands to his face and trembled. It was Madge Hopkins, and, judging from her appearance, she had been growing coarser with every year.

Mrs. Trevor ran to her husband and put her arms about him as if to shield him from the blow.

"I needn't be afraid of me," said the woman, "if you'll give me something to live on."

"Why did I receive that notice of your death?" faltered Trevor.

"I ain't got nothin' to do with that. I ain't got nothin' to live on. Send them remittances that was dropped and I'll let 'em alone."

"Mamma!" cried the oldest daughter, a girl of ten, from above. "What's the matter?"

"Leave your address and go," said Trevor, eager to get the woman out of the house before the children should learn who she was.

The address was given, and the woman went away. Then after a silence Mr. Trevor said:

"Don't worry on my account, dearie. My position is not pleasant, but what is it compared with the interest of you and the children? Be comforted. We will keep the secret. Send the remittances regularly and no one will be the wiser."

But Mrs. Trevor had no intention of letting the matter rest where it was. A shrewd woman, she believed that there had been some weak spot in Madge Hopkins' record which was accountable for the spurious death notice and the failure to claim the remittances.

It was but a week after this, when Trevor came home one evening from business, that his wife received him with a radiant countenance that boded good news. Taking him to a room where the children would not hear and closing the door, she said:

"It's all right. I put a detective on her track, and he has been here this afternoon to report. The woman has never been Madge Hopkins since you have known her. She was secretly married before you met her to a lumber shaver—whatever that is—and, he drifting away, she took you in. But after you left he returned and claimed her. She lived with him; but, fearing if you appeared in their lives she would be tried for bigamy, she sent you the notice of her death, which she had inserted in a paper for the purpose, and gave up the remittances. Her husband has recently died, and she came back on you for support."

Lovers of history will readily recall the influence possessed by the barber-valet and confidant of Louis XI of France, Olivier le Dain, and perhaps less easily the name of Nicholas Stagebeck, who gained a like influence with Christian II of Denmark; while there is no doubt that many other men in the calling have been on the most friendly terms with their famous customers who enjoyed their discourse and did not disdain their advice. Like the barber of Montbard, in Burgundy, who, to the end of his days, boasted that on one memorable morning he had shaved before breakfast "three men capable of ruling a world." Messrs.
